Have an expired teaching certificate?

Check out the

MEA Teacher Re-Entry Program

Meet Stephanie. This program was designed with people like her in mind. Stephanie left the teaching profession to raise her family. Once her youngest child began school, she considered going back to the classroom, but her teaching certificate had expired. Concerned about time and money, she really did not know where to start.

MEA is excited that Stephanie and others can now enroll in MEA's Teacher Re-Entry Program to help bring people back to the profession and continue to improve the lives of our educators and the students whom they serve.

A partnership between MEA and the Michigan Department of Education to bring people back to the teaching profession, this program allows MEA Teacher Re-entry members, for $100 per membership year, to access MEA professional learning opportunities and publications.

Anyone eligible for active membership in the MEA is not eligible to participate in the Teacher Re-entry program. Active members receive full access to MEA professional learning opportunities and all the benefits and privileges of membership.

For additional information, please visit www.mea.org/welcomeback or contact 866-MEA-HELP. Welcome back!

NOTE: Renewal of your teaching certificate is subject to completion of requirements established by the Michigan Department of Education (MDE) and/or state law. The standard number of hours to renew a teacher certificate is 150 hours. For more details, see www.michigan.gov/mde.
