

LOCAL CONSTITUTION AND BYLAWS—CHECKLIST
Revised August 2022

The following items in this checklist should be found in your local's constitution and bylaws. As you review your documents, make sure that you included all of the items, even if your local is currently too small to have to meet the requirements.

Also be aware of the following as you update your local governance documents.

- Review your governance documents to make sure that statements found in different portions of your governance documents do not conflict with each other. A common example of this is when the local President also serves as the first NEA Representative Assembly delegate. In this case, the terms of office must coincide.
- At the National and State levels, Educational Support Personnel has been changed to Educational Support Professionals. It is the local affiliate's choice whether to change its name to reflect this change.
- There may be no provision which places any limits within the active membership in good standing on who may be elected to office (e.g., only tenured members may run for election).
- Local documents may provide provisions for election by acclamation when the number of candidates is equal to the number of positions to be filled. (MEA Bylaw V-A in reference to MEA RA delegates)
- For details on proper local election procedures, refer to "Local Association Election Guidelines."
- Election procedures for all positions may be combined into one procedure. Should a local wish to elect Local Officers, MEA Representative Assembly delegates, NEA Representative Assembly delegates, and additional Region Council delegates all at one time, the election must take place prior to April 1.
- If your local is considering using MEA Online Election system for local elections, contract ratification votes, etc., make sure that your constitution and bylaws do not have any language that might prohibit this (i.e. all elections must be conducted using a paper ballot.) Prototype language to allow online elections is included in the Prototype Constitution and Bylaws.
- If, in updating your documents, you use the prototype language, make sure that you have filled in all blanks.
